Fund Manager Comments

According to the IMF, the global economy is expected to deliver this year the strongest growth in many decades, at 6.0%. The economic recovery following on the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic shock during Q1 2020 has been led by those countries who have either implemented significant fiscal stimulus programmes or had an aggressive vaccine rollout, such as the U.S., the U.K. and China. Developing economies in Africa, Latin America and South East Asia who have both struggled to roll out vaccines as well as having limited means for fiscal stimulus are likely to take much longer to reach pre-COVID-19 levels of economic activity as they face potentially successive infection waves and associated lockdowns. With the U.S. set to outperform its peers, monetary authorities like the Federal Reserve, are starting to talk about withdrawing monetary stimulus. This suggests a rising risk of market volatility in coming months, given elevated market valuations, trading margin and debt levels.

Factors that could boost global growth further are: a) the massive build-up in consumer savings; b) the wealth effect from robust financial markets; c) pent-up demand; and d), an extended commodity upcycle. Factors that could constrain global growth are: a) new variants of COVID-19 and delayed vaccine rollout in the developing world; b) sustainably high inflation or an oil price shock; c) a faster than expected reversal of monetary and fiscal support; d) elevated equity & bond valuations; e) constrained global supply chains, especially in logistics and semiconductors; f) record levels of sovereign and corporate debt; and g) continued geopolitical tension between US and China. In conclusion, the global economy should enjoy robust economic growth in 2021 after experiencing the worst economic contraction in 50 years in 2020 driven by the COVID-19 pandemic and related national lockdowns.

Global stock markets rebounded from their COVID-19 lows, with the OCGEF benchmark returning 32.2% for the year to June 2021 and 3.1% p.a. since the funds inception. Global Equity markets benefited from a flood of liquidity provided by central banks and fiscal support to the economy. The fiscal and monetary support will continue to support equity markets in 2021. The key risks include rising inflation, high valuations and a reversal in fiscal and monetary support.

With the COVID-19 vaccination rollouts gaining some momentum and the lower levels of capital investment and development activity curtailing new property supply, we are starting to see an improving environment for existing property owners. OCGPEF is well diversified with exposure to a number of sectors that benefit from the 4th Industrial Revolution and COVID-19 including Logistics, Datacenters, Storage and Medical Research. There are also a number of sectors that benefit.

Global yields have been on a 40 year structural decline caused by ageing demographics in Advanced Economies and the inclusion of China into the global economy since the 1990s. Following the Global Financial Crisis and the onset of quantitative easing, global yields have fallen well below long term averages. Since the 1950's, the U.S. 10 year yield has averaged 5.7% but fell to 1.5% during 2016 and even lower to just 0.5% in March 2020 during the initial phase of the COVID-19 pandemic. Continued massive monetary and fiscal stimulus and improving global economic growth during 2021 has driven expectations of 'reflation' which has raised global yields and led to steepening yield curves. The benchmark US 10-year yield peaked at 1.75% in March 2021, boosted partly by successive announcements of major fiscal packages in the U.S. Long-term yields retraced somewhat in Q2 2021 as markets seemed to be partly persuaded by the Federal Reserve that inflation risks were transitory. Notwithstanding central banks playing down inflation risks, as Q2 unfolded the Federal Reserve and Bank of England began to openly debate reducing the degree of monetary stimulus. Overall, global monetary policies are likely to remain historically accommodative through 2022 which should keep short-term interest rates well anchored. However, if economic growth continues to rebound strongly, longer-term yields could rise further as inflation risks rise, which could lead to a further steepening in yield curves.
